Whether you are a startup or an investor you cannot escape talk about money. What can you expect from investors? What should you request? How involved can you get with a startup? How much is too much? This is the unique opportunity to hear more about the hardest part of entrepreneurship from Keith Ippel, a founder of global startup school Spring. With over 15 years experience as a leader in technology centric businesses, Keith has accelerated the growth of both small and large companies, launched new products, and raised over $20m in angel investment and venture capital.
